Description

Monochronicle is an urban art and design studio that transforms public spaces through collaborative creativity and innovative technology. We work with artists, designers, architects, engineers, fabricators, and public art experts to deliver impactful, site-specific works that connect communities.

We specialize in consulting and production of large-scale, site-specific art experiences for cities, developers, and institutions. Led by curator and producer Iryna Kanishcheva, the team manages projects from concept and artist selection to fabrication and installation. Monochronicle's work includes producing immersive festivals such as Lumenaurea, a half-million-dollar light-and-art event that brings together international artists, technology, and community engagement to transform public space. Through strong artist networks and structured project methodology, Monochronicle delivers ambitious cultural projects that combine artistic vision with professional production.
