Biography

Cara Lynch is an artist working in New York. She received her MFA from Columbia University in 2020, and her BFA from Adelphi University in 2018. Lynch creates large-scale murals and public artworks that incorporate color and pattern in joyful compositions. She has created permanent public works for the NYC MTA and NYC Health and Hospitals. She has also been commissioned by Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, NYC Parks and Recreation, and NYC Department of Transportation.

In addition to creating public art, she also maintains an active studio practice. She is currently making suncatchers, weathervanes, and wind chimes in the form of the human figure. Recent exhibitions include Rolling, Rolling, Rolling, curated by Nathan Catlin at the LeRoy Neiman Gallery, New York, and Clearing the Air, curated by Jay Davis at Southampton Arts Center.
