Biography

Collaborative Team: Crystal Wagner & Logan Luckey

Cashews n' Tattoos is the collaborative studio of artist Crystal Wagner and engineer/designer Logan Luckey, whose work bridges the worlds of art, technology, and design through large-scale sculptural installations and immersive environments. Together, they create works that merge organic form with engineered precision, exploring the intersection of nature, light, and architecture.

Wagner, an internationally exhibited artist known for her monumental site-specific installations and paper sculptures, brings a deep sensitivity to material, form, and ecological imagery. Luckey contributes a background in engineering, custom large-scale outdoor signage fabrication, and interactive systems, designing complex structural and lighting integrations that bring their shared visions to life.

Their collaborative practice thrives on curiosity and innovation—transforming traditional sculptural approaches through digital design, CNC fabrication, and LED technologies. Projects such as Lux Arcana exemplify their shared commitment to creating public works that engage viewers, inviting reflection on the interconnectedness of natural and technological systems.

Based in Colorado, Cashews n' Tattoos operates as both a creative laboratory and fabrication studio, producing dynamic works for galleries, public art programs, and festivals across the country. Their installations celebrate the synthesis of art and science, offering audiences luminous encounters that transform space and inspire wonder.
