Biography

Scott Boeing is a designer and animator who creates interactive light sculptures that blur the lines between digital media and physical space. With a foundation in animation and visual design, he adapts audiovisual concepts to new mediums, crafting immersive experiences that engage audiences through movement, light, and interactivity.

His recent projects explore the intersection of technology and presence, creating experiences where viewers become participants. Whether mapping thousands of string lights across a forest canopy or programming a 3D LED matrix to mirror live silhouettes, his sculptures invite audiences to see themselves reflected in light.

With a focus on reuse and evolution, Scott often adapts previous systems for new contexts, layering generative animation with real-time data to create works that feel both organic and responsive. His installations have been featured at festivals and public events, offering moments of connection through interactivity, scale, and wonder.
