Biography

Tim Marsh was born in Paris in 1984. He practiced capoeira for 15 years and also draws a large part of his inspiration from this period, exploring tribal motives in the graffiti works he produced during this time.

In 2006 he moved into the fashion industry as a creator of trends for clothing brands, whilst at the same time directing the fashion pages for Snatch Magazine until 2011. It was at this time that he began asserting a more personal style, expressed initially through his first paintings which evoked a conceptual rendering of childhood memories, mainly represented by kinetic and ludic representations of emblematic animals.

He thus developed a very personal architectural style, composing his works on the basis of complex and dynamic geometric forms, patterns, and lines which embed movement within the depths of his two-dimensional works.

Tim Marsh's creations provoke a theatrical mood taking in a palette of retro-style colors which he applies with spray, paint, and Poscas.

His compositions are characterized by the mixture and variety of techniques, developing the work by the use of specific materials and mediums such as tape, stencils, and paint jars in his most recent work.
